Anticipated Benefits of Participating In A Group

Joining a group of strangers may sound intimidating at first, but group therapy provides benefits that individual therapy may not. Psychologists say, in fact, that group members are almost always surprised by how rewarding the group experience can be.

Groups can act as a support network and a sounding board. Other members of the group often help you come up with specific ideas for improving a difficult situation or life challenge, and hold you accountable along the way.

Regularly talking and listening to others also helps you put your own problems in perspective. Many people experience difficulties, but few speak openly about them to people they don't know well. Oftentimes, you may feel like you are the only one struggling — but you're not. It can be a relief to hear others discuss what they're going through, and realise you're not alone.

More about the technique

Jon Kabat-Zin's success in mindfulness is developing the ability to pay attention in a particular way:

- 1) On purpose, in the present moment; and non-judgementally
- 2) Non-judgement and self-compassion

These methods are key to the changes in values and beliefs that underpin depression and that thoughts are neither 'you' or 'reality'.

During this comprehensive course you will be given tailored Mindfulness audio exercises and resources to complete as you attend each week's class.
